

Candis Trusty concentrates her practice in the areas of elder care, probate, and guardianship law.

Representative Matters

- A bipolar father commits a crime and becomes a fugitive. His adult children locate him in Miami and seek our counsel to help their father. Our office coordinates with criminal defense counsel and works to have the children appointed as their father's guardian. The father receives mental health treatment through the guardianship case and the father's rights are restored when he no longer requires the guardian's help.
- A senior parent resides in South Florida who has adult children living outside of Florida. A neighbor ingratiate herself with the senior parent, resulting in the neighbor receiving confidential financial information. The neighbor slowly limits the senior's contacts with the children and friends. The concerned children retain our office to cut off the interloper and put in place safeguards for their parent's finances and health care decisions.
- A special-needs child turns 18. The child's parents seek our counsel to become guardians so that they can apply for government benefits for their special-needs child.
- A loved one's life ends. The family, who lives out of state, comes to South Florida for the funeral. The family only has a short time in South Florida. On an expedited basis, our office meets with the family, obtains court authority to enter a safe deposit box to look for a will, and initiates the legal process to transfer the assets to the persons named under a will or to those who are the heirs if there is no will.
- A family member's mental faculties decline, resulting in poor hygiene, messy home, poor nutrition, medication noncompliance, not following through with doctor's appointments, and vulnerability to others. Once the family notices the decline, the family meets with our lawyers. Our office gathers the requisite personal information, including any financial improprieties to which the family has access, to analyze whether the loved one can no longer manage his or her daily living activities. The pleadings to open a case are prepared and filed to prove that the loved one needs help. And if the loved one lacks estate planning documents, then the court will be in a position to appoint a guardian.
